HONGKONG, NOVEMBER 23RD, 1889. THE report of the Surveyor-General on the great rain storms of the 29th-30th May last is an interesting document, lucidly written, which puts before the community in the clearest manner the progress of the storm and the damage wrought by it. Mr. Brown shows that the estimates of the damage done to public works were exaggerated-even our first estimate of $125,000 was in excessbut the actual amount, set down at $112,783, is a long bill to pay as the result of twentyfour hours' rain. The great landslip from the ridge bordering Rural Building Lot No. of the ill-fated American ship Cheesebrough, Cap-7 and the bursting of the Glenealy drain-were responsible for the most extensive disasters. The former is not at all likely to occur again, even if the record of rain storms is once the side, and the ship broke up, there again broken, but the latter may happen, in- being a very heavy surf on the beach at the asmuch as we have no security that a similar time. When the masts went they took the downpour may not visit the Colony any summer, when it would find the same condi- heavy sees that were breaking over the ship, and tions prevailing in Glenealy ravine. The so the captain, two mates, and sixteen men Surveyor-General thinks the Government was ill-advised in the early days of the Colony as regards the provision made for the carrying off of atorm waters; and most per- bodies of Captain Erickson, of the Cheesebrough sons will share this opinion. Mr. BROWN and four other members of the crew lave been says :- "Situated as the city mainly is, on a strip of low lying land overhung by steep mountain slopes, liable to excessive rainfall, it would appear obvious that a primary element of safety was to convey the water from the various nullahs through the habitable area by open masonry channels, constructed along the natural course of th torrents. Instead of this, however, the adheres. water courses have, with few exceptions, been Government, said they desired the margistance of peace in Europe, and considered that armsments should only be maintained for defensive instead of the natural and straightest course purposes. The feeling of the country was against a speculative policy, and it was necessary torrents have in numerous instances been therefore to abandon the proposed revision violently diverted to avoid interference with the constitution. He advocated, however, separation of Church and State.

In so far as I have been able to judge from personal observation, a very large proportion of these plants have either falled altogether or are merely stunted shrubs. I am awaiting a report from Mr. Ford as to the actual extent of success, with the causes of failure, before considering what measures should be taken under the circumstances.

42.—It is satisfactory to note that the number of prisoners in the Gaol, which was 4.600 in 1886. fell to 4.308 in 1887 and to 3.627 in 1888. the daily average having similarly fellen from . 674 in 1886 to 584 in 1897 and to 531 in 1888. the total decrease in both cases being over 20 per cent. The returns of prisoners tried in the Courts show also a falling off, which if it may be taken to indicate a decrease of crime is probably due to the severer discipline introduced into the Gaol. The number of prisoners still bears an abnormal proportion to the population, and the fact can scarcely excite surprise in view of the hard struggle for livelihood among the people of China, and the immediate neighbourhood to the Colony of the Province of Kwangtung, of which the extremely dense population is said to be the most lawless in the Empire.

POPULATION. 43.—Statistics of the estimated population are given in the Colonial Secretary's report; but it may be well to point out here that the difference between the number returned at the census of 1881 (160,402) and that estimated for 1888 (215,000) shews an increase of 344 per cent. in 7 years and that the ratio of women to men which was I to 2.56 in 1881 is now estimated at 1 to 2,52. This great, and apparently permanent, disproportion between the sexes would appear to justify special coution in applying to Hongkong that deprivation of protection from certain diseases, which has been deemed expedient in England.

I am glad therefore to be able to nort that a site has at length been selected the plan of the buildings approved; so the may be hoped, the work will now proceed wo out further delay.

50.—But second to no otherwork in imports or necesity is that which is intended to e the junction of the East and West Prayes be ombankment. carried along the front of Naval Yard and the Military Cantonments, the plans of which were forwarded to Lordship early in the year. This work expediency of which has been recognised by Colonial Government for many years hough it has now for the first time received entire concurrence of the local authorities presenting the Army and Navy) has for its p cipal object the provision of additional mean communication between the Easternand West portions of the town, now almost out off one another by land in the compation of Admiralty and War Departments the narrow road which runs through this prop being insufficient for the present traffic entirely inadequate to permit of that expan of the town eastward which is required provide an outlet for an overcrowded populat Besides the main advantage derivable from scheme there are other incidental once of m importance to the Imperial Departments. corned. Thus the Admiralty will obtain claimed land worth (at the low estimate of square foot) $156,792, and, what is of more portance, will save the cost which would sho have to be incurred for the removal of the sent silted up and often noxious foreshore front of the Naval Yard, obtaining in its pla convenient cut-stone basin, 400 feet by int; offering a much needed protection to b and launches, as well as sufficiently deep w co e along shore at all times of tide. W the War Department will obtain land we at a similar low valuation $1,325,856, much which will not, I understand, be required Military purposes, and will thus be avail for sale. Under these circumstances I not permit myself to entertain a doubt the substantial Imperial contribution will be n towards the cost of the work estimated $691,000, which would be a heavy burthen if quired to be borne entirely by the Colonythis more especially, inasmuch as it is the struction caused by Imperial property which necessitated the expense. In any case it may hoped that an improvement so absolutely need for the welfare and progress of the Colony v not be long delayed. To prevent all communion of this kind he directed that the men should work and sleep apart from the other prisoners, and that their two warders should attend them night and day. . But though the rigour of discipline kept them back from free intercourse, no watchfulness could check the stolen words of comfort that helped the weary men to bear their degrading let. That night, the first of their life together, Michael Sunlocks looked into Jason's face and said. "I have seen you before somewhere. Where But Jason remembered the hot words that

He tried to lough as he said this, but in spite of his brave show of unconsern, his deep voice Broke and his strong face quivered. "But what's your own name ?" he said abruptly

"Call me brother," said Michael Sunlooks. "To your work," cried the warders, and they were histled out. Their work for the day was delving sulphur from the banks of the Solfataras and loading it on the backs of the ponies. And while their warders dosed in the heat of the moonday sun, they wiped their brows and rested. At that moment Jason's eyes turned towards the hospital on the opposite side of the hill, and he remembered what he had heard of the good woman who had been nurse there.
